A Cultural Excursion at the Park

Design Ideas for Cultural Recreation at Puente Hills Landfill Park

Interpretive Signage Programs

Signage and interpretative elements offer a significant opportunity to share stories of the landscape and the surrounding communities. These park features could be as simple as wayfinding elements that help visitors navigate the park; they could also serve to educate visitors about the landfill and its ongoing operations, share insights on importance of the site in regional history, or inform community members about the phased development of the park lands.

Are there particular histories that are significant to you and your community?

What stories do you think we should tell?

What languages should our signs be in?
